If you're using an incremental browser such as the Netscape Navigator, you'll see the results as they come in. With non-incremental browsers, you'll have to wait a minute or two. Users of Netscape 1.1 and HotJava will see an animation of our agent searching for the requested album.

KAIST Jae Kyu Lee, CEC
BargainFinder Agent

BargainFinder is now searching nine stores for their prices of your album. Clicking on the name of a store will take you directly to your album in that store.

Bear in mind that BargainFinder is an experimental prototype agent, built to support research. It may not be able to handle all of the conditions and variations that a commercial agent would. Andersen Consulting does not guarantee BargainFinder's results.

26% of our survey respondents so far would like stores to use in-line advertising to let them keep service up while keeping prices down. Agree? Disagree? After BargainFinder finishes searching, fill out a survey or tell us what you think.

Limitation of BargainFinder Agents

1. Natural language processing on the hypertext is imperfect and time consuming yet
2. The structured information like product specification and prices can be stored in the database more effectively and efficiently
3. Combination of the dynamic web page for human customers and the database for agents necessary
